Presidential Election Chartbook

Bottom Line

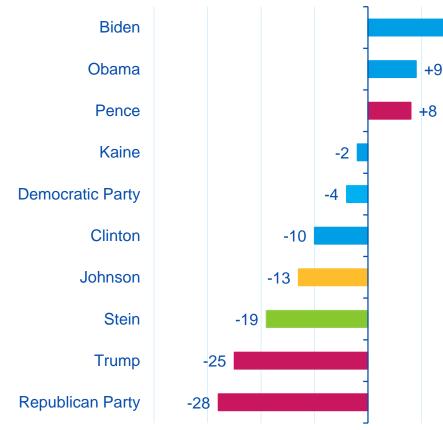

- Clinton increases lead in post-debate polls, including key swing states such as Florida, Colorado, Pennsylvania and Ohio
- Low number of undecided voters and disparate views on the candidates underlie growing polarization
- Our state-level vote-share model still projects a Democrat victory in Electoral College despite national estimates implying a tighter race
- Congress likely to be divided according to current projections
- Post-election zeitgeist unlikely to be conducive to major reforms and cooperation
