

Market CommentFed made inter-meeting 50bps interest cut

- The Fed made an emergency inter-meeting 50bps interest cut (see). Moreover, despite today's interest rate cut, the odds of an additional 25bps cut at the March meeting are still high (100% probability). The movement came after the G7 communiqué (see) showed that G7 along with the IMF are monitoring the situation and seem ready to implement measures to cushion the negative impact on the economy, including implementing fiscal measures -where appropriate-, while central banks will continue to fulfil their mandate to support price stability, economic growth and a sound financial system.
- The ECB pivoted and seems likely to implement stimuli. Yesterday afternoon's statement from Ms. Lagarde confirmed that the Covid-19 spillovers pose a risk to growth and to financial markets, which could have negative implications for medium-term inflation and the transmission of monetary policy, and announced that they are ready to take appropriate and targeted measures, as necessary (see). However, most members consider that further interest rate cuts are less appropriate in the current circumstances than implementing other support measures, such as some kind of TLTRO to help SME funding. Currently, OIS markets are pricing in a 70% probability of a 10bps ECB interest rate cut in March and 100% in June.
- February's preliminary Eurozone inflation data supported market expectations. Eurozone preliminary CPI Core YoY is increasing slowly from the previous results (1.2% YoY; previous: 1.1% YoY) driven by slumping energy prices, as a result from the weaker global demand for oil. In addition, EZ CPI Estimate YoY decreased slightly in February (1.2% YoY; Cons: 1.2% YoY; previous: 1.4% YoY) fulfilling market expectations.
- Safe haven yields pared the increase, after the Fed cut rates, with the US 10Y yield returning to levels below 1.1%, while the German 10Y yield ended flat close to its day-low (-0.61%). Furthermore, peripheral bond yields extended today's declines after the Fed's actions, ending the day falling significantly.
- In FX markets, the USD dollar depreciated against the main G10 currencies, while the euro extended its appreciation after the Fed interest rate cut, but trimmed gains. Despite the Fed's actions, concerns about the Covid-19 continued to boost the JPY. The lower U.S. yield and U.S. dollar depreciation helped EM to gain some ground, and appreciated across the board.
- In commodities, Brent oil prices inched up after reaching its lowest values in a year, breaking the downward trend caused by the global spread of the Covid-19 virus.
- Equity markets rebounded in Europe, but the Fed's actions failed to spur an additional upward move in U.S. equity markets, after yesterday's sharp rebound. Moreover, the interest rate cut weighed on the banking sector. The S&P volatility index (VIX) inched down marginally but remained at a high level, suggesting investors' jitters remain.
