Mexico City Carlos Serrano Chief Economist. Mexico carlos.serranoh@bbva.com + 5255 5621 4354 Recent activity data such as mining investment, revealed yesterday, reinforce our view that domestic activity remains robust in Peru. The moderation in output growth in March, which we expect to be confirmed today, should be temporary, as it is likely to be explained by calendar effects. In Brazil, we expect retail sales to show some moderation in consumption at the end of the first quarter.

Peru - Mining investment continued its strong growth in 1Q13

According to the Ministry of Mines, mining investment grew 23% YoY in 1Q13 driven by large copper projects such as Las Bambas and Toromocho. This is consistent with high business confidence in the same period (66 points in 1Q13), and should have led to private investment growth in double-digits in the first quarter, reinforcing our call for 6.5% output growth in 2013e.

What to watch today

Brazil - Retail sales (March, 08:00 NYT)

March retail sales should confirm that private consumption moderated in the first quarter of the year, which is to some extent due the negative effect from higher inflation in the period. In spite of this moderation, we expect GDP to grow by 1.1% QoQ in 1Q13e, driven by investment and the industrial sector.

Peru - Output growth (March, 12:00 NYT)

We expect GDP to have increased by 4.2% YoY (consensus: 4.6%), and thus indicate that economic activity is cooling. However, the picture is quite different after factoring-in the negative statistical effect of the Easter holidays on the March print, and the adjusted figure indicates that the underlying trend remains robust, growing close to potential.
