Construction grows more than expected

- With the results for September, with a 2.5% monthly increase and annual growth of 7.1%, the industry has posted six months of positive monthly changes in seasonally-adjusted series.
- At component level, growth was recorded across all sectors, reflecting an environment of recovery in which construction grows faster than the economy as a whole.
- Other indicators, such as employment in the industry and cement sales, all showed favorable conditions for construction at the end of 2011 and in 2012.

Construction grows more than expected in each of its components.

In September, the construction industry's growth was 7.1%, while each of its components grew by more than 6% compared to the same month of the previous year in seasonally-adjusted series. Building posted growth of 7.4%, and public works of 6.9%.

The indicators show positive performance.

As estimated on previous occasions, cement sales have recovered recently, with a growth rate of 4.3% compared to the same month of the previous year. Similarly, employment in the construction industry continues to report positive growth rates, this time of 3.3%.

The overall figures point to continued growth in the sector.

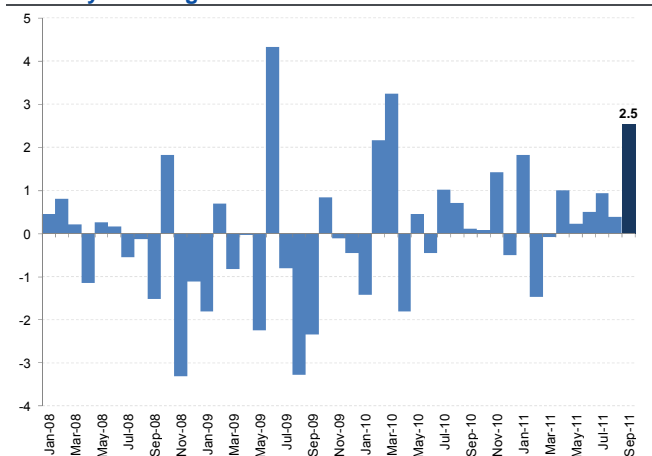

In short, the performance of the construction industry continues to improve in each of its components, and even though it has not yet reached the pre-crisis production levels, we estimate that they will be reached in early 2012. Even though the figures show higher than expected growth, we are maintaining our growth forecast at the same level, together with the expectation of short-term recovery.
