GDP in Chile in 3Q13 was slightly above estimates (BBVA and market), driven by a reduced domestic demand dynamic and a sharp increase in mining exports that reduce the risks of current account imbalances in the medium term.

Chile - GDP growth reached 4.7% in 3Q13 driven by mining sector

GDP growth reached 4.7% YoY in 3Q13 (+1.3% QoQ sa), slightly above both our and market estimates (4.4% YoY). Domestic demand slowed at 1.3% YoY, mainly driven by a sharp drop in inventories (actually, domestic demand excluding inventories expanded 4.7% YoY in the quarter), while private consumption and gross investment increased 5.3% YoY and 3.2% YoY respectively. Meanwhile, exports showed a sharp increase of 13.1% YoY, mainly driven by mining exports. Finally, and in line with our estimates, the current account deficit reached 5.1% of GDP in 3Q13, equivalent to USD3.4bn. Despite this figure, the slowdown in investment and consumption should reduce risks of current account imbalances in the medium term. All in all, recent data validate our assessment of a pause in the policy rate at today's monetary policy meeting (see our Chile Flash for details).

Chile - Reformist winds will remain subdued, despite new composition of Congress

Considering all votes, Bachelet's coalition wins one additional seat in the Senate (from 20 to 21, equivalent to 55% of total representatives) and eleven more seats in Chamber of Deputies (from 57 to 68, equivalent to 56% of total representatives). This new conformation of Congress will contain any rapid constitutional changes, due to the high quorums needed and not achieved. All in all, we anticipate reforms will be gradual and milder than expected, given the outcome of the parliamentary elections.

Colombia - Imports grew, driven by investment not consumption. Residential investment will boost growth in early 2014

Imports grew 10.0% YoY (above our expectations) and the trade balance stood at USD -65.5m (below our outlook). A good performance of capital goods and fuel imports (+14.7% YoY) offset the slowdown in consumption goods purchases (-1.0% YoY). Meanwhile, building permits grew 23.9% YoY and stood at 2.2 million square metres, remaining above historical averages since 2000 (1.4 million). All in all, imports anticipate a recovery in investment faster than expected, although this is the first figure that shows an upturn for this component. However, the unexpected fall in consumer imports might imply a lower growth in household spending than initially considered.

What to watch today

Brazil - IPCA-15 (November, 06:00hrs NYT)

November's IPCA-15, which measures inflation from mid-October to mid-November, is expected to jump to 0.60% MoM from 0.48% MoM in the previous reading and, therefore, bring to a halt the downward trend in annual inflation.

Chile - Monetary policy meeting (November, 17:00hrs NYT)

After cutting the policy rate by 25bp and removing the easing bias in October's communiqué, we expect the Board to keep rates at 4.75% and to reintroduce a dovish bias that will leave the door open for further rate cuts in coming quarters. Nonetheless, we consider that new innovations in the monetary policy rate will take place after the release of the Monetary Policy Report in December, which will contain the revision of the macroeconomic outlook and a better assessment of the local economic slowdown.
