Also published yesterday was the current account deficit, which was in line with our estimates and mainly financed by FDI. Available data are consistent with the expected growth for the year at 3.4%, and our assessment that this year more monetary stimulus is needed.

Chile - GDP growth at 2.6% YoY in 1Q14, consistent with our baseline scenario for this year

GDP increased 2.6% YoY in 1Q14 (+0.7% QoQ sa), slightly above both our and the market's expectations (+2.4% YoY). Domestic demand declined by 0.3% YoY, driven by a fall in gross investment (-5.0% YoY) with a sizable negative figure in machinery and equipment (-16.9% YoY), and partially offset by an increase in both private and public consumption (+3.7% YoY and +9.6% YoY respectively). Meanwhile, real exports increased by 5.4% YoY while imports showed a contraction of 3.6% YoY in 1Q14. Finally, and in line with our estimates, the current account deficit reached 1.2% of 1Q14 GDP equivalent to USD795mn, while on a yearly basis it reached 3.1% of GDP, still financed mainly by FDI. In the context of a slowdown in investment and consumption, medium-term risks of current account imbalances declined substantially. All in all, recent data validate both our GDP growth expectation for 2014 (at 3.4%) and our assessment of the necessity of further monetary stimulus during this year (policy rate at 3.25% in eop), although this will remain data dependent, particularly over CPI inflation figures (see our Chile Flash in Spanish for more details).

What to watch today

Colombia - Imports and trade balance (March, 17:00hrs NYT)

We expect a slight growth of 4.6% in imports, to settle at USD4,693mn. Exchange rate depreciation explains in part the slow dynamic of imports, despite the robust performance of retail sales and consumption in general. Meanwhile, deteriorating exports due to lower international prices of commodities and local export supply constraints will cause the trade balance to remain in a slight deficit of USD68mn during March.
