Market Comment | Quiet financial markets ahead of Donald Trump speech

Global Financial Markets Unit 10 Jan 2017

BBVA Research

- Bond and equity markets were broadly steady ahead of US president elect Donald Trump's press conference, which increased uncertainty. Moreover, investors are also awaiting the US earnings season (see). The major market sensitive events were the following:
- The GBP sank once again to an 11-week low amid "hard Brexit" concerns (see), sending the FTSE100 to a new record high (see).
- The USD remained steady, as the upcoming speech by US president elect Donald Trump injected uncertainty into financial markets. At the same time global stocks struggled for gains and the European banking sector underperformed, while sovereign bond yields were little changed, with the exception of Portugal due to supply effects
- The TRY depreciated once again, despite the fact that Turkey's central bank lowered its foreign exchange reserve requirements (see). After the announcement, the TRY trimmed its losses temporarily, but depreciated again afterwards.
- Oil prices remained highly volatile after yesterday's significant fall on reports of higher US oil production (see).
