Market Comment | European Banks rose as bond yields resumed their upward trend

Global Financial Markets Unit 13 Jul 2017

BBVA Research

- The sentiment remained slightly positive in the financial markets, following yesterday's testimony by Yellen, considered to be dovish. This sentiment was also underpinned by t oday's positive trade data from China. There was less volatility across the board. Moreover, the upward trend in oil prices also served to prop up the positive sentiment.
- Nonetheless, European sovereign yields resumed their upward trend, pushing up banking sector stock prices. This movement was also reinforced by higher-than-expected exports from China, allaying concerns of a potential slowdown in its economy (see). Moreover, the MSCI World index today hit an all-time high (see), indicating the appetite for equity shown recently by investors.
- Oil prices rose once again, despite reports suggesting that OPEC compliance rates with oil production cuts may be at their lowest level in six months (see). Nonetheless, EM currencies were mixed, following yesterday's strong appreciation.
