Market Comment | Earnings results support equity markets ahead of FOMC meeting

Global Financial Markets Unit 26 Jul 2017

BBVA Research

- Financial markets were broadly steady today, with few economic data being released and no significant news, ahead of the result of the FOMC monetary policy meeting. We expect the FOMC to announce the start date of Balance Sheet Normalization in September, while maintaining the markets aligned with a gradual tightening path. Nonetheless, investors will be particularly watching for any change in the inflation wording (see).
- Equity indices edged up in Europe and the US after encouraging earnings reports in both the US and Europe, and following yesterday's upward trend. Stocks are hovering around historical high levels. Meanwhile, sovereign bond yields remained flat today.
- The USD edged up after the US Senate approved by the smallest of majorities a debate about repealing Obamacare legislation. In the next few days various different proposals will be discussed and voted on, none of which are likely to succeed (see).
- Oil prices rebounded after US crude oil and gasoline inventories fell by significantly more than forecast (see), pushing up EM currencies.
