

Global Financial Markets Unit 25 Oct 2017

BBVA Research

- Earnings reports continued to drive financial markets, both in the US and in Europe. Today saw more disappointing results, dragging down financial stocks (see) and leading to an increase in equity volatility.
- European yields remained little changed ahead of tomorrow's ECB meeting, in which a potential tapering may be announced. Only a slight decline of peripheral risk premium was observed. On the other hand, the EUR appreciated slightly on upbeat confidence data as German IFO Business Climate (October) surprised to the upside.
- US Treasury yields rose, surpassing the recent high levels, amid positive economic data (see) in the US (strong US core durable goods orders and new home sales), talks of a potentially hawkish next Fed Chair and a tax reform on the horizon (see).
- The GBP appreciated at a significant pace, while UK Gilt yields rose significantly as 3Q UK GDP growth was higher than previously expected (see), paving the way for a potential rate hike in the UK.
- Oil prices continued steady, maintaining their recent four-week highs (see), as news of the potential reduction of oil supply offset the disappointing growth of US crude oil inventories. Against this backdrop, EM currencies slightly appreciated. Notably, the MXN appreciated sharply after Banxico said in a statement that it would react to recent MXN volatility (see).
