BBVA Research

- The BoJ maintained its monetary policy stance and both inflation and growth forecasts (see statement). The BoJ's Governor said that the BoJ is not ready to reduce monetary stimulus. Bond yields declined across the board after the announcement (see), especially in the US. European sovereign risk premiums also narrowed further. In addition, Japanese stock prices rose notably (see).
- US stock prices rose notably after the US government reached an agreement to avoid the government shutdown at least until mid-February (see) and positive corporate earnings. Nonetheless, the early optimism faded after Trump made his first tariffs move (see) raising concerns about protectionism. The USD suffered slightly after the announcement (see).
- European stock prices remained little changed, as did the EUR after yesterday's rise and despite the positive surprise in the European ZEW economic sentiment index (see).
- Oil prices rose after the IMF rose world economic growth prospects, while OPEC continued to give reassurances on oil production cuts (see). Nonetheless, EM currencies declined across the board, amid NAFTA negotiations.
