

Market Comment | Markets inched down as trade concerns persist

Global Financial Markets Unit 14 Mar 2018

- Financial markets showed no major movements during today's session, as there were no significant events during the day.
- Stock prices inched down across the board amid uncertainty and concerns regarding trade wars (see) and trading relations between the EU and the US. The European banking sector suffered especially after the European Commission announced proposals to increase banks' capital requirements (see).
- Sovereign bond yields inched down, with the exception of European peripheral countries in the aftermath of the Italian elections, which triggered political uncertainty in the region (see). In Germany yields inched down against the backdrop of Angela Merkel's embarking on her fourth term as Chancellor (see).
- The EUR remained little changed as E CB members' speeches continued signalling a cautious message: Draghi pledged to be patient (see), persistent and prudent, while Villeroy said that the ECB is in a gradual policy normalization (see). Praet admitted the need for more specific policy guidance (see).
- The GBP and the RUB remained little changed despite political u ncertainty regarding UK and Russia relations (see).
- Oil prices inched down after OPEC raised its forecasts of oil supply this year (see). However, EM currencies remained little changed, despite a higher than expected industrial production figure in China (see) for February.
