

Market Comment | Tentative mood ahead of first Fed meeting chaired by Powell

Global Financial Markets Unit 21 Mar 2018

- Financial markets were in a tentative mood, with major assets showing a mixed performance across the board, ahead of the Fed monetary policy meeting, the first to be held by the new Chairman Jerome Powell. It is expected that the Fed will increase interest rates and review its forecasts (see).
- Technological stocks underperformed, especially those related to data misuse, information unveiled early this week (see).
- Meanwhile, sovereign bond yields were mixed amid lingering worries about US tariffs (see). Nonetheless, European peripheral risk premiums remained at their recent low levels.
- Commodity prices rose across the board following the recent upward trend triggered by worries about the Middle East and after a surprise decline in US crude oil inventories. Following higher commodity prices and lower USD, emerging currencies showed a widespread appreciation, especially the MXN amid positive news regarding NAFTA (see).
